¹The University cannot predict the loans, interest rates, and fees for which a student may qualify as lenders have different criteria for both loan eligibility and loan rates. However, students who apply with an eligible cosigner may 1) increase their chances of being approved for the loan and 2) qualify for more attractive loan rates.

²The University of California solicited quotations on numerous private loan products. The evaluation of the loans was based solely on borrower loan costs, which took into account the lowest rates and loan fees that each lender offered as well as any borrower benefit discounts. It was assumed that not all borrowers would qualify for each type of discount, so a probability factor was used for each type. The lenders selected through this evaluation process are listed above, in the order in which they were ranked by the University, as of the rates on April 1, 2009. It should be noted that the basis on which the loans were selected may not be representative of the rates and fees for which most students/cosigners will qualify. However, the University used the best possible data available on which to rank the loans.

³Deferring payments while in school and during the grace period will increase the overall loan costs. Unpaid interest that accrues while in school and in the grace period will be capitalized (i.e., added to the loan amount) at repayment.

⁴This benefit typically remains available during active repayment for as long as the borrower's monthly payment is successfully deducted from the borrower's account. Also, the interest rate reduction typically does not lower the monthly payment amount but reduces the interest that accrues, thereby reducing the total amount repaid.

NOTE: Additional conditions may apply, and lenders may change loan benefits without notice. Borrowers should rely solely on the information each lender provides regarding loan terms, interest rates, and benefits and are encouraged to seek details about them. There are significant differences in lender policies.
